MR. GLADSTONE'S EAGERNESS TO URGE THE HOME RULE BILL THROUGH THE HOUSE

NOTHING FISE ALLOWED TO STAND IN THE WAY-THE CHAIRMANSHIP OF COM-MITTEE AN IMPORTANT FACTOR. (BY CAULE TO THE TRIBUNE.)

Copyright: 1893: By The Tribune Association London, March 11 .- The temperature is rising fast, and it looks as if before many days or weeks are over the state of political and social feeling in London may become not less strained than it was in 1886. The House of Commons is a barometer, or perhaps rather a coast-guard station. where storm signals are already hoisted. Mr. Gladstone becomes daily more impatient and some of his followers, is not the man to submit There was something like a scene be tween them on Thursday in the course of a rather prickly conversation on the order of business. Mr. Gladstone has found himself compelled to postpone his motion for the second reading of Home Rule bill from next Monday to the following Thursday. Monday is to be devoted to discussion on the report of that Evicted Tenants' nission over which Sir James Mathew preded with such singular impartiality. On and after Thursday, Home Rule is to hold the field.

Minister mean," asked Mr. Balfour, "that all other public business is to be et aside, whatever its condition and however necessary it may be to keep the law by getting on with Supply ?"

This question angered Mr. Gladstone, and he answered in that manner of disdain which he can assume when he likes:

make any calculations which would lead to the anticipations of the right honorable gentleman."

This occurred at the very time when Mr. Falfour was doing his best to keep his own party in hand and when Mr. James Lowther, who has resumed his old role as a guerilla leader, was heading a small mutiny. Mr. Lowther insisted on a division on Mr. Gladstone's motion for suspending the midnight rule. Mr. Balfour and most of his colleagues on the front bench, including Lord Randolph Churchill, walked out of the House without voting.

The reason why Mr. Balfour's question so stung the Prime Minister is plain. The Prime Minister is bent on rushing his Home Rule bill. He is determined to bring the House to a vote on the second reading before the Easter vacation. To that end he is employing all the known means of parliamentary coercion. He has taken the whole time of the House for Ministerial business. He has abolished the rights of private members for which, when in opposition, he showed the most tender solicitude. He resorts on the one hand to morning sittings, and on the other suspends the rule which brings contentious business to a close at midnight. He has set up Saturday sittings. He thrusts aside all other public business except, first, such financial business as is absolutely necessary to keep the Government going; second, such business as the Irish insist on: third, such proposals as the various sections of his supporters compel him to accept as the price of their loyalty.

dealings with the House. The sole pretext for them is the Home Rule bill, and the sole cause for them is to be found in the wilfulness of its author. No doubt he feels that his time limited. I do not like to suggest that age is the mainspring of his impatience. He is forever referring, often with dignity and pathos, his age; but he cannot endure the slightest allusion to it by anybody else. Lord Randolph Churchill, seeking to explain the precipitancy of Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule proposals in 1886, described him rather roughly as an old man in a hurry. To-day he is older by seven years, and in a greater hurry than ever. He knows that last chance. If he fails now, he fails He knows that his bill, supposing that some shape, must be thrown out by the House before, to a winter of agitation, both for Home Rule and against the House of Lords. He has a definite forecast of events. He intends to do far more than force Home Rule through the House of Commons. At the earliest possible moment has intends to send up to the House of Lords other completed measures, all radical in their purpose, each concession to some separate interest or caprice. each capable of being represented to the country as conceived in the interest of the people, each bearing in its bosom some boon for the masses. Each of them will be hateful to the House of Lords, since each will be a fresh innovation upon settled principles, or a fresh attack upon property or upon vested interests.

The Lords will, nevertheless, find themselves in a dilemma, cunningly constructed for them by the oldest and craftiest of old Parliamentary hands. If they pass these measures they strengthen the enemy and they do violence to their own convictions. If they reject them, they lend presistible force to the agitation against their own Chamber and against their existence as a legislative body You will hear the Prime Minister's voice resounding throughout the land: "The Lords are the implacable foes, not only of Home Rule, but of every Liberal measure and of every reform by ch the people would benefit."

Here, therefore, is the full explanation of Mr. Gladstone's present hurry, and of the tremendous pressure which he is putting upon the House of Commons. He resorts to this pressure in order to have a chance of carrying Home Rule-not this year: nobody supposes that it can be carried this year-but next. To carry it alone would probably be, in his own judgment, beyond his power, England either hates Heme Rule or cares little about it. But there are measures for which she does care, and Mr. Gladstone's tactics consist in binding them and Home Rule together. He is going to reverse Bright's simile. He believes it easier, as it probably will be, to drive six omnibuses sbreast through Temple Bar than to drive one.

There is another reason for hurry. The less this bill is understood, the more likely it is to be read a second time. Give the country time to master its provisions, and they will reject it. A knowledge of its true character will make it dious. The constituencies will presently begin to make their opinions felt by their representatives in the House. That is what Mr. Glad stone wishes to avoid. It is a complicated scheme. Time is needed to impress on the people of Eng land a complete view of its perplexities and ab surdities. The Unionist leaders are doing their best. But to fight the bill in Parliament, and t fight it before the country at the same time, is a tremendous effort. What they want is the Easter vacation, in which to expound and exbill to those whose political life is imperilled by it. That is what Mr. Gladstone does not mean they shall have, and that is, in the view of his opponents, one of his motives for forcing a vote before the House separates at Such speeches as those of Mr. Balfour at Ealing on Tuesday, and of the Duke of Devonshire at Bradford on Thursday, are full of peril, because they are full of truth and of light and leading. There must be as few of them as possible. Mr. Gladstone believes that he can depend on his majority as matters now stand, and almost every-body else believes it. Whether he could de-pend on it after a campaign in the constituencies s much more doubtful question. Sensitive, in-, is the conscience of the average Member of ent to criticism and correction from those of his fellow-subjects on whom his re-election no easy matter in the best of circumstances. It will now have to be done with Mr. Mellor as chairman, and Mr. Mellor has proved himself a weak chairman. He has no experience, not much knowledge of the forms of the House, and is painfully wanting in authority, in quickness, in decision, in courage, in most of those qualities which are most essential to a presiding officer. The scene of last week discredited him and almost destroyed the prestige which ought to attach to his position. It is the irony of fate. If Mr. Gladstone had offered the chairmanship to Mr. Place, a country house at Westchester which he took Courtney, and if Mr. Courtney had accepted it, which is very doubtful, the future would be much brighter to him.

Mr. Courtney is a Unionist, as the Speaker himself is a Unionist; but neither of them ever had any polities in the Chair, and Mr. Courtney would have conducted the business of Committee with decision and dispatch, quite regardless of more imperious. Mr. Balfour, whose command its nature. As Mr. Courtney he might think the over his own temper is more complete than over Home Rule bill a bill of disunion, but as Chairman he would have driven it steadily through. to oppression, even if the oppressor be the Prime Mr. Mellor cannot, and the practical politicians who protested against leaving a post worth $12,500 a year in Unionist hands are now lamenting a mistake which promises to be of no slight advantage to the Unionist cause.

The scene of Thursday was followed by another yesterday, shorn, however, of some of its interest by the absence of Mr. Gladstone, who had been summoned by the Queen. But it was significant, and Sir William Harcourt may be trusted to omit few chances of exasperating his opponents. You are trampling on the liberties of the House," exclaimed Mr. Balfour. "You are deliberately preventing the progress of business," responded Sir William. These things are always said on such occasions. The cry of oppression is met by the cry of obstruction. The irony of fate is again visible. It is the Irish who now complain of obstruction; they, who, but for obstruction in the House and crime in Ireland, would hardly "With respect to Supply, I am not able to have a political existence. Mr. Gladstone, how ever, carried his motion for a sitting to-day, but Mr. Balfour, angry in his turn, retorted sharply: least majority he has yet obtained, and it is a I want no calculations from the Prime Min- warning-he may or may not heed it-that coercion as a means of constitutional convulsion is not popular in the House of Commons. BITTEN BY A MAD CAT.

Lawrence Brennan, a young man employed as conchman for Dr. T. Lawrence Hicks, of Flushing, L. I., a day or so ago went into the barn and up to the loft, where he found a half-famished cat in the hay. It glared at him like a tiger, and was evidently mad. Brennan, to end its sufferings, drew a revolver and shot at it. At the first discharge the cat gave a leap at Brennan's face. The coachman thrust his arm out to shield himself, when the cat fastened its teeth into the fleshy part of his arm, just below his elbow, and hung there with the tenacity of a buildog. Brennan seized a balestick, but not until he had broken all the bones in the cat's body did the animal let go its hold. The wounded arm was dressed by a physician, and the man was swollen to an enormous size, and Brennan became unconscious. At different times in his dell'rium he mewed like a cat and otherwise acted strangely. He is now partly recovered, but his arm is in a sling.

CAPTAINS TO LOOK FOR THE NARONIC.

The owners of the Naronic, the White Star freight teamer which has been out from Liverpool for four weeks, are still building theories based upon the doubtful hypothesis that the big freighter is affont. They now think that she is drifting around near the Azores, and they are anxiously awaiting the arrival of vessels from St. Michaels and Fayal. The captains of White Star steamers have instructions to deviate from the course toward the South to look for the Naronic. The Germanic, which arrived yes-terday, brought no news of the missing freighter.

A CHURCH DISPUTE TO BE SETTLED IN COURT. The Supreme Court at Trenton has granted a writ of certiorari removing all the proceedings and orders of Bishop Scarboro against the Rev. Mr. Jernings, of Grace Church, Westfield, N. J., to the court. Nothing more can be done in the matter until the court disposes of the case. The writ was obtained by Craig A. Marsh, of Plainfield, who had been retained by the A. Marsh, or Plainneld, who had been retained by the Union County ministers, who folt that Mr. Jennings was being persecuted. A great point has been scored in obtaining the writ, as the courts are always reluc-tant to interfere in church matters.

THE WEEK IN SOCIETY.

though the vaudeville dinner given by Lispenard Stewart and A. Lanfear Norrie was decidedly novel. It is rather refreshing to note that some of the bachelors of New-York make now and then an effort to return the civilities which are continually shown them. An example of the spirit of reciprocation was set early in the winter by John C. Furman, who has been untiring in his hospitality, as shown at the Spencer Norrie was given in the ballroom at Delmonteo's. It was in reality a "beauty" show, for the handsome girls and young matrons of society were out in force. Coffee was served in the red room while the ball-room was being arranged for the vaudeville entertalament, and a programme such as has been heard nightly at the Vandeville Club was carried out as soon as the guests returned to the ballroom. While this style of entertainment may not be elevating it is certainly harmless and amusing. It is a matter of regret to many that the Vaudeville Club, which set the example for Messrs, Stewart and Norrie, will end its entertainments for this season in the coming week. This dinner served as a temporary farewell, the special car for New-Orleans, the City of Mexico and special car for New-trienns, the City of Mexico and other points of interest in tropical regions. On their return they will spend some time in Chicago. Another bachelor, Robert Center, moved by the same spirit of reciprocation, has recently had some

AN INCREASE IN THE MORTALITY.

THERE WERE A FEW CASES OF INFLUENZA IN THE CITY.

An increase of mortality in the city last week wa due in great part to the weather, which aggravated pulmonary c mplaints. Pneumenia alone caused 219 denths, and there was a noticeable increase of fatality in cases of bronchitis and consumption. Reports of four deaths from influenza during the week indicated that the "gr.p" has begun to cause more suffering in the city again. Physicians of the Health Department said yesterday that there had been more com plaints about influenza in the last fortnight than during the previous weeks of the winter season, but they did not think that the disease would cause serious trouble as in the three former winters. They that the dampness and foulness of the streets, caused by the melting heaps of snow and garbage, had much deaths reported at the Bureau of Vital Statistics last week numbered 942, or 80 more than in the previous week. The first bout of the evening was between "Jack" Metirath and I rank Craig, of this city. Craig is known as the "Harlem cofee cooler." Craig was taller and had a longer reach than his rival, and he got the viftory and the accompanying pures after a half deren rounds had been fought. C. Coughlin, another white man, was pitted against John Jackson, the colored purillet known as the "Tennessee Hercules." The bout was devoid of science and lasted only two rounds. Coughlin went to the floor in just was performed last Monday, and the religious ceremony on the day following. A number of people well known in New-York were present. Mr. and Mrs. Desprez will sail for New-York early next month.

HENRY E. ABBEY RETURNS TO TOWN. Henry E. Abbey, who went to Chicago early last week to look after the spectacle which he is soon to produce at the Auditorium, returned to New-York on Friday. When he went away to that he would have the lease of the Metropolitan Opera House, but while he was gone there came wars and rumors of wars. The fact was developed that Mr. Abbey had no lease as yet, and the suspicion was developed that Colonel J. H. Mapleson night get it after all. Mr. Abbey said yesterday tha while he had no lease as yet, he had promises which he thought were about as good as a lease. He is quite confident that the open house next season will be under his charge, and he says that its fate will be settled before long.

BROOKLYN TROLLEY LINES EXTENDED.

The first car on the Flatbush-ave, extension of the Brooklyn City Railroad trolley lines, passed over the tracks in Flatbush-ave, to the terminus at Vernon-st. yesterday afternoon about 5:30 o'clock. The super-intendent and assistant superintendent and other officers of the company, together with town officials officers of the company, together with constraints and prominent citizens of Flatbush, were on the car, and the trip was an entire success. It is understood that on and after the opening of the line for traffic to morrow the rate of fare from Fulton Ferry to the terminus of the road will be five cents, doing away with the extra fare of three cents, which has been collected at the Brooklyn City ilne.

HE FELL FROM A WINDOW TO DEATH.

TO HELP THE POOR.

WORK OF THE UNIVERSITY SETTLEMENT,

PLANS OF THE SOCIETY-A NEW BUILDING TO BE ERECTED.

The University Setflement Society held a meeting resterday afternoon at the home of William Jay Schieffelin, No. 242 East Fifteenth-st., for the purpose of arousing the interest of people of means in the work of the society. There were 100 prominent people present, and all expressed a hearty sympathy in the purposes and chieffer of the completication. in the purposes and objects of the organization. Seth Low, the head of the society, presided. He made a short address, in which he outlined the society's plans. He said among other things that the University Settlement was for "the advancement of the more back-ward social classes," and for the study, by the laboratory method, of the laws upon which that advance ment depended. The members also planned the creation of new institutions for similar purposes, under the charge of experts. The modern world had grown too large for the successful practice of the ancient virtue of almsgiving. Methods should be employed which would induce the backward classes to help themselves as much as possible. The Rev. Dr. W. S. Rainsford, of St. George's Church, talked for a few minutes and said that he was heartly in sympathy with the work. He added that the way to better the condition of the poor was for the rich to max with them, to work among them. and, if necessary, to live among them. "It is one of the encouraging signs of the times," the Doctor added, "to see the representative people of the city interesting themselves in our poor, unfortunate brothers, and the fact that this society is non-sec-tarian adds additional interest to its work."

stanton Colt, who has charge of the Forsythst. mission, spoke of the way in which reform could be accomplished among the poor people in New-York. He said in part: "The great mass of the I must be collightened in economic and social prin ass of the people position to carry out radical reforms can only be brought about when the intellectual life of the people brought about when the intellectual life of the people has been organized. The organization of the intellectual and moral life of the people is the crying need of the day. We must have intelligent, educated men who are willing to go among the poor and ignorant to teach them. Our idea is social reform based on contact with the beneficiaries."

Dr. Colt, in speaking of the slums, said that their sanitary condition was frightful, and that it would require five years of hard work to improve it. Among other things discussed at the meeting was the proposed new building on the East Side, to take the place of the small house at No. 26 Delancey-st. Plans for the building have already been made. It is to be a six-story structure with a gymnasium theatre, schoolrooms, clubrooms, sleeping-rooms, dincost about $80,000. The society also considered plans for making a public park in the Tenth Ward.

Among those present were William M. Evarts, John Bigelow, Carl Schurz, Colonel William Jay, J. F. Kernochan, the Rev. Staart Dodge, Henry Holt, Harris W. Roome, Henry D. Sedgwick, Mrs. Howard N. Potter, Mrs. John Kean, Mrs. W. D. Sloane, Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard, Mrs. Faul Dana, Mrs. W. P. Douglas, Mrs. Josephine S. Lowell and Miss Chanler, rost about $80,000. The society also considered plans

OBITUARY. EDGAR S. TWEEDY.

Danbury, Conn., March 11 (Special),-Edgar S. Tweedy died at his home in Danbury Friday night after a brief illness. He was eighty-five years old. Mr. Tweedy was born in Danbury, and when a boy went to New-York and engaged in business. He after-ward became a member of the firm of Hoyt, Tweedy & Co., hat manufacturers, in Danbury. He was widely known in political life and was prominent in financial circles. He organized and helped to build the Danbury and Norwalk Railroad. He was one of the incorpora ters of the Danbury Bank, now the Danbury National Eank, and was on its Board of Directors. Mr. Tweedy assisted at the organization of the Danbury Board of Directors. He was also treasurer of Danbury for many years. Mr. Tweedy was chosen to represent Danbury in the Connecticut Legislature in 1845, but he did not aspire to political office. was a stanch Whig while the party existed under that name, and he assisted at the organization of the Republican party, and was a delegate from Connecticut to the National Convention which nominated Fre mont in 1856. Again, in 1860, he was in the National Convention which monimated Lincoln, and was one of two delegates from Connecticut to cast the first vote for that gentleman. In 1880 he was chosen a dele-gate to the National Convention which nominated Garfield. In 1831 Mr. Tweedy married Elizabeth S., daughter of the Rev. David Belden, of Wilton, who survives him. They had seven children—four sons and three daughters.

CAPTAIN J. H. M'MILLIN.

Pittsburg, March 11.-Captain J. H. McMillin, one of the best-known river men in the country, dropped dead this morning on Grandview-ave. He owned and commanded the famous steamer Silver Wave, which, just before the war was ordered to transfer guns caused intense excitement, and a mob took possession of the boat and prevented the guns from being to-moved. On this same boat Captain McMillin ran the blockade established by the Confederates above Vicksburg and carried provisions to General Grant. His boat had a narrow escape from destruction and he won great praise from General Grant for his gallant action. The deceased was also the inventor of the steam capstan for steamers. He was seventy-seven years old.
